[illegible] THE GUERRILLA CHIEF.—For some years before the rebellion Forrest was well known as a Memphis speculator and Mississippi gambler. His associates were Mississippi steamboatmen, Tennessee negro traders [illegible] gamblers [illegible] of a boat that ran between Memphis and Vicksburg, and if stories are true, made it quite as much to his interest to pass his nights at the card table in the cabin as on the hurricane deck. These winnings were held with a thrift not usual in such cases, and regularly invested in choice lots of negro fellows, who were carried to the large plantations down the river and sold to his friends, the cotton planters, at a handsome advance on their cost in Tennessee. As his fortune thus increased he engaged in plantation speculation, and in 1860 was the nominal owner of two plantations not far from Goodrich's Landing, above Vicksburg, where he worked some hundred or more slaves.

This gave him admission to society a grade above his former associations and he began to cover the hilt of six shooter and keep his bowie knife more concealed. But when after the election of Lincoln in the Fall of 1860 Yancey and Governor Harris and Jeff Davis took the stump through the Southwest for secession, the fighter got the better of the speculator, and Forrest at once developed that taste and talent for bloodshed, which amounts almost to military genius. The same qualities that made him a cool fighter with the bowie knife and a winner at the card table give him steady nerve in the cavalry charge and enabled him to withdraw his forces in time to secure a retreat when he finds himself outnumbered.

Forrest began at the foot of the ladder. He enlisted as a volunteer private in the first or about the first infantry regiment that was recruited at Memphis at the first firing of the Southern heart. But his qualities as a horseman and a fighter soon attracted notice and he was made Captain of a cavalry company. Promotion came and he was Lieutenant Colonel of a regiment.

He took his first lessons in the cavalry skirmish on the line of Green river, when Buell advanced on Bowling Green in the winter of '62.

When Grant won his first laurels, and struck his first great blow at the rebel cause at Donelson, Forrest was senior Colonel commanding a brigade, and after the surrender headed his first charge, cut his way through the Union lines, and withdrew his brigade in safety to the mountains of East Tennessee. Soon after he made a swift and stealthy march on Murfreesboro, caught the good easy commander on the post napping, and carried the town by a sweeping charge. Since then he has been ranging from the Ohio river on the north to the banks of the Tombigbee, and from the mountains of North Carolina to the Valley of the Mississippi, now making a raid two hundred miles into our lines, now hanging sullen and defiant on the rear of a retreat, now driving back Smith in disorder, and now falling back himself, but fighting every mile before Grierson, now charging with five hundred picked men through the streets of Memphis, and escaping with a trivial loss, and, as the darkest and most damning of his rebel exploits, charging into Fort Pillow, and after the out-numbered garrison had ceased firing and were wholly at his mercy, permitting his flushed and demoniacal crew to shoot, stab, roll down the bank and toss into the river six hundred unresisting victims.

So far he has proved the most regularly successful and the most dangerous of all the rebel cavalry leaders. He is more collected, deliberate and defiant than was that romantic thief and good natured freebooter Jack Morgan. He commands a much larger force, and wields it with more power and skill than Mosby. He fights harder, and is more sullen and defiant in retreat than Stuart. He is more brilliant and effective than Wheeler. When this war subsides from regular field and post strategy into irregular, predatory and guerrilla warfare, the probability is that Forrest may act independently of Lee, and draw around him all those fierce, disappointed and reckless spirits who may escape from the withering volleys and crushing charges of Grant and Sherman.

Lee is too calm a man and too orderly and well grounded in military first principles to fight after systematic strategy becomes quite hopeless; and Beauregard, though a good engineer, is no leader of men. But Forrest loves to shed blood, and is quite likely to keep on killing out of pure revenge after the "Southern Confederacy" has been swept in the limbo where are congregated all the dreams of fools.

"Gone glimmering, 'mid the dreams of things that were, A schoolboy's tale, the pageant of an hour."

In person, Forrest is formidable, not to say impressive. He is a little over six feet in height, strongly built, and, without looking at all plump, weighs about one hundred and seventy-five. He appears to be thirty eight years of age, is the perfection of vigorous manhood, insensible to fatigue, incapable alike of sympathy, or weakness, or fear.

He is a consummate horseman and a deadly pistol shot. Yet his control over his men is absolute, for he takes no airs, will talk familiarly with any of his men and never, by his actions, reminds them of the military interval that separates the General of cavalry from a private in the ranks. The outlines of his face are handsome and the expression generally pleasant. But now and then when roused a little, or issuing a positive command, the devil in him lights up his eye with a fearful gleam, and you can see the terrible brand that the Almighty stamped upon the brow of the first murderer, "A man of blood."

While genial with his men, he is often exacting and savage with his officers. Does he detect a gleam of insubordination in an officer, he visits not by the tedious machinery of even a drum-head Court martial. He knows a more summary method.

On one occasion he reprimanded a young lieutenant in language of great severity, and the officer stung by the insulting words, was for a moment overcome by his passion and drew his pistol. Instantly the bloody chieftain walked deliberately up to the offender, drew his bowie knife, and using his immense physical superiority to the utmost literally cut the poor fellow to the ground, and after the death stab had been given plunged the reeking dagger again and again to the hilt in the quivering flesh, and then when his hellish revenge was sated, coolly wiped the dripping blade, returned it to the waistband of his pantaloons, and rode away quietly as though he had shot a yelping cur.

Such is the essential cut throat ferocity of his nature.

Forrest is indifferent to the pleasures of the senses, a spare eater and abstemious in his habits. But he loves strong, nervous and muscular excitements. When he hears the sharp volleys of the closing fight, and sees now and then a horse with empty but blood stained saddle come galloping to the rear, his impatience sometimes gets the better of his discretion—his hand, before he knows it, is on the hilt of his revolver, and he will wheel and dash in where the fight is thickest. Yet, like every successful gambler, he keeps a good eye on the main chances and is hardly the man to throw away his life at the head of a forlorn hope. The likelihood is rather that like other hard fighting knights of the bowie knife he will drift away with some of his followers into the far Southwest and become a Mexican adventurer or a Nicaragua filibuster.—New York Times.

[illegible] MORNING, MAY [illegible]

The Freedom of the Press

There [illegible] the [illegible] press of the State of Oregon. There [illegible] everyone [illegible] the [illegible] sympathy with [illegible] interests and [illegible] that the Democratic party as a whole [illegible] we have never said, nor [illegible] President Lincoln refused [illegible] and we find pleasure in thinking that [illegible] to establish peace at the expense of all [illegible] of national honor, was entertained only by the class whose constant aim has been to gloss over the atrocities of treason, to hide [illegible] the progress of the war, and [illegible] great political sentiment has been a [illegible] to slavery and determination [illegible] present and future injury.

There is a large and influential class of Southern sympathizers among us, and the Democratic press have been in their service. Their texts have been taken from Richmond editorials and State Rights speeches; they have insidiously and constantly heaped obloquy and abuse upon the late President, and all affairs of the Government under him; they have constantly harped upon tyranny, and contended for freedom of speech to blaspheme the Government. Where is the candid Democrat who has favored the preservation of the Union and prosecution of the war? Who will deny that this course has been disloyal to all intents and purposes? We are not able to believe that these persons are willing to rejoice at the murder of Lincoln, for we have too much charity for humanity to think the vilest of them base enough to do so. Many a man has urged measures, however, that ended in results from which he shrank back aghast and appalled. So now the Peace Democrats look with horror upon an act, to which his own efforts has contributed, and watch the columns of the peace papers have threatened and indicated as likely to occur. [illegible] suited their style to point editorials with the example of Brutus. It answered their end to inflame the popular mind by allusions to tyranny and the proper fate of tyrants. Very likely they did not intend to hound on an assassin, but most certainly they did nothing to hold one back. Newspaper threats, like newspaper libels, cost nothing more to publish than truthful and appropriate matter; but the world is not always aware that the politician when he declaims for effect, thinks more of its credulity than of the truth of what he utters. The cry of tyranny has not been lost upon some. Sic Semper Tyrannis is but the answering echo to peace editorials, and the assassin's hand the fulfillment of the covert threat.

We have counseled no violence and rejoice that none has been witnessed in our State. Had a single Democratic paper intimated satisfaction at the news of the assassination, it would have been a stigma on the State if the people had not destroyed it; but there were no such expressions, and we believe there was no one capable of making them. We would respect our opponents, at least in part, and have no desire to misrepresent them in anything. When we arraigned the Copperhead press to answer the charge of being accessories, before the fact, to the President's death, we felt that they were so. Certainly, their efforts have tended to excite the minds of many against him; they have calumniated him and threatened him, and others showing more courage and acting out the theory their leaders have advanced, have murdered him. Peace Democracy has much to answer for. It cannot hope to be held blameless, for out of its own mouth it is condemned. There are many who have been Democrats, and who voted for McClellan, but excepting McClellan himself—who are not entirely united to the fortunes of Peace Democracy; men who have felt pleasure at National success, and who undoubtedly rejoice at the approach of peace, won by the Nation's valor.

These men feel no regret at the thought that slavery has found its end, and find it in their hearts to condemn the rebellion. All such should come out from among them and leave the band of [illegible] to enjoy an odium greater than attaches to the rebel who has fought for State sovereignty, and only equalled by the cowardly reputation acquired by the bushwhackers of the present time and the negro traders of the past. Their policy has resulted in what it encouraged—assassination—let them answer it as best they can.

THE TREASURES OF [illegible].—Judge Clough calls our attention to a mistake in yesterday's account of his trip to Owyhee. It was 1,500 pounds of bullion instead of ounces, that Marion Moore, Esq., had taken away, which was the product of the "Morning Star" Mills, from crushings of Gold quartz. There was still remaining at the mill which Judge Clough saw, at least a ton more of bullion, and, as he rather loosely expresses it, "about a bushel of free gold, saved on blankets as the tailings wash over them." The whole value of the precious metals lately saved at that mill he [illegible] at not less than a quarter of a million of dollars. Such returns are astonishing, and we shall soon expect to hear of other great lodges that yield well. The Oro Fino was the first discovered and appears to be second to none. The Minear Mill is also running, though with what results, we did not learn. When the time comes that good and effective mills, and plenty of them, are working [illegible] Jordan Creek, there will be an immense yield of gold and silver from [illegible] to enrich the world.

THE EUGENE ROAD.—A correspondent writing from Eugene, says: "The contract for building our road for a distance of forty-five miles from Butte Disappointment was lately let to Benj. Simpson of Salem, for twenty-six thousand five hundred dollars in coin. The work is to be completed by the first of November. The company are at work with a large number of hands on other parts of the road."

John Lane, son of General Joseph Lane, was surrendered to General Grant with the army of Northern Virginia. John had risen to be a Major in the rebel service. At the commencement of the war he was at West Point. It is a pity he used his military education upon the wrong side.

With all the pretence of mourning and regret of several of the Copperhead papers of this State, it is not certain that none of them went into mourning for the death of the President. As they did not go [illegible] back when their party did, they may be [illegible] for [illegible] some other matter worth grieving over.

[illegible] will have a fine time reading the new set of comments upon his treaty with Johnny [illegible]. The editors are having [illegible] freely, and it will have a tendency to make him more nervous than ever.

Letter from Traveler.

... have made everything green. It was night when we entered the Golden Gate.

The [illegible] over the water and lights [illegible] the city [illegible] Telegraph Hill [illegible] eastward on the Bay [illegible] impresses the visitor with the [illegible] of youth and old age. Some of the old houses are the same [illegible] and New [illegible] dwellings upon the hill, have the old look of the [illegible]. There are old dilapidated buildings, also narrow filthy courts, irregular, uncouth structures, reminding one of what he has supposed to belong to the past ages of architecture. On the other hand, the bold beautiful grades, the railroads running in all directions, a constant convenience to citizens and travelers, the rapid extension of the city in all directions—new and improved buildings going up everywhere, the magnificent hotels, the activity, energy and spirit of the people, the vast shipping and commercial interests that concentrate here, and [illegible] all persons of the Slope and of States and countries gathering on the Pacific, all produce an impression of youthful vigor and freshness upon the visitor.

TRAVELER.

AN EXTRACT FROM AN OLD WAR ADDRESS.—JESSE APPLEGATE'S ORATION.—[illegible]—On the 4th of March last, Jesse Applegate delivered an address at Oakland in the Umpqua valley, "To Encourage Volunteering." By order of Capt. Rossborough, the address was printed as a handbill, and has since found its way into the newspapers. A copy of it lies before me, and as it is not in the ordinary vein of appeals for volunteers, I transcribe a passage as a specimen of the philosophy of a distinguished Oregon farmer:

"In the noble rivalry for honor, the highest prize will be awarded to him who makes the greatest sacrifice. Between those who make equal sacrifices, the meed of honor is due him who serves in the ranks, over him who holds a commission; and if the young man does not mean to make arms a profession hereafter, I would advise him to enlist as a private, rather than seek the less honorable but more responsible position of a subaltern.

"War is terrible, but it is not an unmixed evil though the means in the hands of the Deity to punish nations for their sins. Like strong medicine it also renovates and improves; and as the thunder storm purifies the air, and purges it of the noxious vapors engendered by a long calm, so does war arouse men from the lethargy of an enervating peace, it stirs their energies, it purifies their hearts, and draws them away from the corrupting pursuits of pleasure or of lucre. It stimulates to noble deeds, to heroism, to self devotion. A war like ours, of principle, infuses principle, and like the atmosphere purified by the storm men for generations after such a struggle, act in all things from higher and better motives than when their hearts are incrusted in the selfishness, and their minds absorbed with the jealousies and petty rivalries resulting from the pursuits of peace."

The address closed with a handsome but extravagant eulogy upon the Puritans, to whom the orator declares "the United States owes its freedom of conscience and Republican Government."

By their incorporation into the family of distinct colonies which formed the present government of the United States, the Puritans gradually lost their original type of society and government which was a stern and illiberal kind of Democratic Theocracy, based upon a people, homogeneous in their origin, politics and religion, and [illegible] and in return infused into their associates much of that individual spirit of independence and dislike of external control and established formulas, which in itself is either productive of good or evil, as it may be [illegible] to be directed and guided from above or below.

Jesse Applegate must some day have a conspicuous place on my [illegible] of Oregon worthies, but for the present I must content myself with limning a feature or two only, as an accompaniment to the above extract from his oration.

He is one of our earliest and most distinguished pioneers, coming to Oregon across the plains from Missouri, as far back as 18[illegible]. Settling originally in the Willamette Valley, in 18[illegible] he removed with his flocks and herds to the Umpqua, and located on his present farm, a romantic and isolated glen at the base of the [illegible] capped Yoncalla, where he has since resided. A farmer and surveyor, [illegible] store keeping, always upon the [illegible], leading a life of incessant toil, wielding the pen or guiding the plow, he is a man of [illegible] and a student, often holding singular opinions which he loves to maintain in the face of opposing numbers, and as a writer, particularly of letters, he [is] the master of a most pure and racy English style and idiom. Without being in any sense a party leader and having little of the [illegible] talent that conduces to getting along in the world and the dignified management and direction of men, yet, by force of his self-abnegation, [illegible] persistent pressure [illegible] his thoughts, opinions and prejudices all along the page of our history. He is now well advanced in years, and [illegible] within the sound of the sweet babbling brooks, in which he has so long [illegible] his early [illegible] and to be buried in the base of the mountain that gives name to his country home. [illegible] years, it is pleasant to think, [illegible] while enjoying the rich fruit of his early, private, [illegible] mental and physical toil, as they [illegible] and [illegible] from the highway, and pause a moment to contemplate the tomb of "the Sage of Yoncalla." [illegible]

A DIVISION ON MEXICO.—We are told by a friend that some time ago a gentleman named [illegible] Robson [illegible] belonging in southern Oregon, [went] to Mexico, to satisfy himself about the country and decide upon the propriety of emigrating thither. Many of his neighbors in Douglas county waited to hear from him, leaving the question of their own emigration dependent upon his judgement. Some of them were [illegible] of removing that they bargained off their farms in anticipation of so doing, though they seemed to have changed their minds of late and have declined completing the transfer. Mr. Robson, after travelling considerably over Mexican territory, is said not to encourage emigration thither and the furor for leaving [illegible] has cooled down so that there appears little prospect of the hegira taking place. General J. Lane was said to be one of the most determined of those who contemplated a speedy departure, but he is now partially discouraged. [illegible] distasteful, he says. While he acknowledges that [illegible] rule, he thinks it a hardship no doubt to [illegible] strongly [illegible]. No doubt there are quite a number who like him would be glad to go elsewhere and find a home. It would not be a bad thing if those who have sympathized with the rebellion were to travel into Mexico and remain there. It is too a hardship for them to see the old glories of Democracy reduced to the [illegible] that at present [illegible] the "Democratic" era, [illegible] they can't emigrate, they can remain to appreciate the good [illegible] with which they are already blessed.

EMANCIPATION IN BRAZIL.—Slavery [illegible] appears to be doomed the world over. By the Constitution of Brazil slavery will expire in that empire in twenty years, but many of the leading statesmen are anxious for its more speedy end.

SHIP INTELLIGENCE.—A [illegible] the improvements [illegible] made a considerable [illegible] [illegible] Columbia street [illegible] Willamette [illegible] Washington street [illegible] [illegible] the sake of decency let us have decency.

A Survey or Work [illegible]—Mr. George Vose, formerly a machinist at the Oregon Iron Works in this city, visited Owyhee about one year ago and was the [illegible] of a very rich ledge. After securing a [illegible] property [illegible] Idaho Territory, he returned to Portland, associated with him as a partner E. E. Morse, of the firm of Millwain & Morse, and immediately set about the construction of a Quartz Mill. [illegible] the patterns, etc., being the work of his [illegible]. Yesterday the mill, being a ten stamp [illegible], with steam engine, boiler and all complete, was [illegible] in its way, and we predict it will get [illegible] nine-tenths of the heavy "capital stock" [illegible]. It will [illegible] and [illegible] to its [illegible], every man about it [illegible] working man, and [illegible] of better service to the country than [illegible] of rich companies [illegible] all.

Fat Men.—We happened to be present in a company [illegible] yesterday, when the subject turned upon the weight of individuals, such as there appears to be a number in and about Portland, when the sum [illegible] with the great result of fourteen hundred and [illegible] pounds as the aggregate weight of six gentlemen living in this city. Mr. [illegible] was given at 270 pounds, and it is a wonder that he was not killed on the accident on the Sacramento, Capt. [illegible] 30, Mr. [illegible] 250 lbs., Capt. [illegible] 225 lbs., [illegible] 210 pounds, Capt. [illegible] 208 pounds, all of whom are in the prime of life, healthy, and a strong tendency to be large is a part of their constitution. A very lean association is soon to be organized in the city, to include those whose weight shall run above 180 pounds, any member that shall fall short of the standard weight to be placed on the [illegible] list.

The River.—The Columbia river, on the 1st inst., is reported to have risen three feet at the Dalles for the [illegible] hours following, being up to Tuesday noon, [illegible] twenty inches higher and for the succeeding [illegible] hours gained but little more than ten inches. [illegible] at Couch's wharf in this city [illegible] during the preceding forty eight hours up to [illegible] yesterday, being but four inches for the last day. [illegible] Couch's, Ankeny's and Knott's wharves are [illegible] water, but it does not in the least interfere with [illegible]. If the water should rise inches [illegible] three days past, it will not [illegible] and [illegible] the trouble [illegible] to the streets.

[illegible] Afloat.—The steamer, E. D. Baker, which was [illegible] in December, 1862, in the Transportation Co.'s [illegible] between Portland and Oregon City, has been [illegible] nothing but a hull, yet in the capacity of a barge, [illegible] still very useful, and we notice it at present in the [illegible] trade between this Point, W. T., and East Portland.

Delinquent Tax Payers.—Marshal [illegible] has given notice, and published a list of property that will be sold on [illegible] of May, for non-payment of city taxes under the [illegible] of 1864. Sheriff Stitzel also gives notice this [illegible] of a sale of property for delinquent taxes of the county, which will commence on Friday, the 2d day of June, and continue from day to day until sold.

Locked Up.—A man by the name of Bickley was yesterday placed under arrest in this city, on complaint of [illegible] of the leading [illegible], who has extended him credit, and had sufficient reason to believe that it was his intention to defraud them. He gave satisfactory security that he would appear at the Circuit Court for trial, [illegible] permitted to go at large. [illegible] was [illegible] on other complaints, taken from his peaceful [illegible] night, and lodged in the County Jail.

[illegible] Festivals.—The children of the Sister's School [illegible] Third Ward of this city, were yesterday treated to [illegible] recreation in the open air, among the shade trees [illegible] near the city, and we are reminded that the [illegible] of the Academy are to have another [illegible] We have no programme of the exercises, but [illegible] "It has been pretty [illegible]" [illegible], the crowning of a "May Queen," appropriate [illegible], etc.

[illegible].—We are under obligations to [illegible] for a string of a dozen fine brook trout, which were [illegible]. And were our table a few evenings since [illegible] not the time essential to the exhibiting of these [illegible] but, it does not in the least interfere with our [illegible], and we wish exactly [illegible] who have [illegible] W., to be, and enjoy the pleasure privileges [illegible] our city.

Circuit Court.—A special session of the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon for Multnomah county, Judge [illegible] presiding, will convene at the Court House in this city on Monday next. The calendar presents fifty [illegible] and twenty nine law cases for trial.

Music.—Professor [illegible] has favored us with an assortment of new music, including some excellent songs, by [illegible] Joe. C. Clark, and the late Stephen C. Foster. We return our sincere thanks to the Professor for [illegible] favors, and beg to be remembered by him often. [illegible] like "[illegible]."

[illegible] Taken.—Has stolen from our table a copy of the Portland Directory, three volumes bound in one, labeled on the outside, D. C. Ireland, and a copy of [illegible], the latter taken yesterday, between the hours of [illegible] and 12 m. But if he will return them [illegible] shall be asked.

Lecture this Evening.—John F. D. Shannon will deliver a lecture this evening at the Presbyterian Church, in behalf of the Christian Commission. Admission [illegible].

On the evening of the 12th of April, 1861, Leroy Pope Walker, the first Secretary of War under Jefferson Davis, addressing a jubilant crowd of Secessionists at Montgomery, boastingly said:

"No man could tell where the war this day commenced would end, but he would prophesy that the flag which now flaunts the breeze here would float over the dome of the old Capitol at Washington before the first of May. Let them try Southern chivalry and test the strength of Southern resources, and it might float eventually over Faneuil Hall itself."

A Novel Reverse.—Recently some twenty [illegible] men arrived at Wheeling, Va., from Dodd[ridge] county and enlisted. They stated that there are not four men liable to draft left in their neighborhood, and with respect to the county at large, they also said that the wealthy men of the county, who were generally rebel sympathizers, refused to do anything likely to relieve the people from the draft, so the loyal men united in a determination to leave and allow the rebels to get out of the draft as best they could.

A sum has been raised among the New York merchants and underwriters, to be bestowed upon the officers and crew of the Kearsarge as a testimonial of appreciation of the victory achieved over the Alabama last year. The sum of twenty-five thousand dollars is being thus distributed by Charles H. Marshall, Esq., one of the wealthy ship owners of that city, being the [illegible] for that purpose.

Bierstadt, the artist, who travelled through Oregon some time since, seems to have electrified the world of fine arts with his magnificent picture of Mount Hood. If he has succeeded in transferring to canvass the sublime view that so impresses all lookers on, it is well worth the $20,000 which Alex. T. Stewart is said to have offered him for it.

"A Cough is generally the effect of a Cold, which has either been improperly treated or entirely neglected. When it proves obstinate there is as this shows a weak state of the lungs, and is often the forerunner of Consumption."—Buchanan's Domestic Medicine.

Always reason to fear the consequences,

STOP THAT COUGHING!

Some of you can't, and we pity you. You have tried every remedy but the one destined, by its intrinsic merits, to supersede all similar preparations. It is [illegible] ing you should be reluctant to try something else after the many experiments you have made of trashy compounds foisted on the public as a certain cure, but

NEWELL'S

Pulmonary Syrup!

Is really the VERY BEST remedy ever compounded for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis and Consumption. Thousands of people in California and Oregon have been already benefited by its surprising curative powers.

WHAT KILLED HIM!

Dr. Hall, in his "Journal of Health," speaking of the death of Washington Irving, asks the above question, and adds: "He might have remained with us for some years to come, had it not been for advice, kindly intended, no doubt, but given in thoughtlessness and reckless ignorance.

He Had a Cold!

Which, by some injudicious prescription, had been converted into asthma." Let me say to Dr. Hall that that "prescription" was not

NEWELL'S PULMONARY SYRUP.

KEEP IT IN THE HOUSE, use it freely, give it to your children upon the slightest indication of a Cold, and you will think and speak of it as all do who have become acquainted with its merits.

[illegible] our troops [illegible] making [illegible] letter [illegible] with General [illegible] the War Department.

Washington, December 7, 1861.

H. H. W. Gist, Governor—Sir: So deep is the [illegible] which I feel in South Carolina [illegible] that under present circumstances I [illegible] from offering to her my services in [illegible] art and to engage in the manufacture [illegible] the United States. I am not aware that there are in use now [illegible] belonging to the [illegible] cannon of improved [illegible] manner to advance in the [illegible] interests of the North [illegible] early answer on the subject.

Most truly and respectfully,

CLARK MILLS.

This Clark Mills who wrote this precious epistle [illegible] the sculptor who made the very bad statue [illegible] which now stands in the [illegible] at Washington, and who [illegible] the [illegible] N. Y. Evening Post Dec. 20th.

[illegible] the following day has the annexed:

A gentleman who has every reason to know the truth when [illegible] has sent the following note in reference to Clark Mills, whose treasonable letter to the Governor of South Carolina we printed yesterday:

[illegible] of the New York Evening Post. Clark Mills who, so late as December, 1861, wrote from Washington to the Governor of South Carolina proposing to manufacture cannon for that State as shown in the letter you published yesterday, is not only still in Washington, but a month since occupied as his studio, a room in the Capitol, [illegible] when I was there in February was modelling by some improved machinery—machine is the proper term for his art—the bust of a Massachusetts Major General. I would suggest that [illegible] in the Capitol is the place for him—the Capitol prison.

[illegible] AT THE GALLOWS.—The telegraph has already announced the execution of this noted [illegible] in a letter from Louisville the following details of his last moments are given:

The execution took place at four o'clock, [illegible] on the commons at the corner of Sixteenth street and Broadway and being public, an immense crowd of people, notwithstanding the short time that elapsed between his trial and execution, assembled with all the singular but natural avidity that human nature displays for scenes of this description. Women and children were eager for a sight of the doomed man, and his daring deeds coupled with the romance of his feminine appellation added not a little to their zest. Jerome Clark stepped upon the gallows floor with apparently the same proud firmness and audacity that characterized his demeanor on the day of the trial, and, after kneeling while a clergyman in attendance offered a prayer to Heaven in his behalf, stood up erect and with no perceptible tremor or signs of fear while the final preparations were made. At ten minutes past four he was launched to his death. He was a man of about five feet eleven inches in height, well made and muscular, and yet possessing a boyish appearance. His hair was nearly black, long and somewhat curling. His eyes were black and very bright but there was a roving and half leering expression about them that detracted from their beauty. His features were regular and handsome. Nothing but his slight [illegible] was calculated to betray his identity when appareled as a female, if indeed there is truth in the reports of his exploits in that disguise. Whether true or not, it will certainly be a theme for future novelists.

HORRIBLE DEATH IN A RAILROAD CAR.—The Buffalo papers give the following particulars of the death of Mr Godfrey Schultz, of that city:

He was on his way to Warren, Pa., when a collision took place, and he grasped his carpet bag and essayed to make his escape from the car. Just then the baggage car came crashing in through the car he occupied, and before he could release himself he was jammed in between two seats. The stove was upset, and in a moment the car was in flames. Every effort was made to release him from his frightful position, but without avail. He cried in his agony to those who were near him not to let him perish, but they were powerless. Large quantities of snow were thrown in through the window of the burning car and with desperate energy he stooped down, gathered it with his hands, and applied it to his face and body. One man worked his way into the car, but could not reach the helpless victim, and was got out with great difficulty after having been badly burned. But the merciless flames continued to wrap the unfortunate man in their folds, and for twenty minutes he was clothed in fire before the soul deserted the veriest cinder of a body. He was a man of great strength and vitality, and his sufferings no pen can adequately describe.

JOHNNY AND THE DUTCHMAN.—A correspondent with Sherman's army relates the following:

The day that Wade Hampton charged Kilpatrick's camp, I was at General Garlan's headquarters, when a rebel soldier, carrying a carbine, and a Teutonic member of the Ninth Michigan cavalry came up. On reaching the tents, the Dutchman saluted and said:

"Captains, there ish un brisner."

"Where did you get him?" inquired the Adjutant General.

"Well, yer see, I was in der beginning of der fight, and got cut off; and, without der gun or horse, hid in der swamp. Pime by, I sees der Shonney coming up, so I shust shumped pehind ter tree to grab him. Der tam fool didn't came close ter nuff, an' I shoops out mit 'surrender!' I shook hands mit him, and we made une compact to strike fer camp, and, if it so be we make rebel lines, I was to pe his brisner, and if ter were ter Union lines, he is to po mine brisner."

The story seemed so improbable that the rebel was appealed to and confirmed the Dutchman's tale, merely adding:

"I were tired of toting the gun, and wanted to sell out cheap for cash or hard tack."

THE UNITED STATES.—The London Times, evidently with a feeling of apprehension, publishes the following in regard to the naval and military power of the United States:

It is remarkable that the Americans, though eagerly ascribing finality to all their military operations, attach no such character to their military establishments. The "ninety days" term has never been applied to their armaments. The war, they have repeatedly assured us, is a mere passing affair, but the establishments which the war has suggested are evidently regarded as permanent institutions. The Federals have turned to the old countries of Europe for instruction on the subject of standing armies and navies, and at the moment when a reduction of armaments is recommended here the Americans are deliberately laying the foundation of military and naval power.

THE MODESTY OF GENERAL GRANT.—In a speech in the Senate, Saulsbury, of Delaware said he had seen General Grant for the first time that morning on the floor of the Senate, and it seemed to him (Saulsbury) that the President had made a great mistake in appointing him to that high position—that the man who did not know how to "cut a swell" better than he, ought not to be Lieutenant General. Why, there was not a Lieutenant of the Home Guard in the State of Delaware who could not keep up bigger style than this man whom the President had injudiciously selected for Lieutenant General. There was not a Lieutenant or Provost Marshal that Grant could set down to keep the people of Delaware from voting, that could not cut a better swell than General Grant. He (Saulsbury) thought this a fit subject for the consideration of the Senate. [Laughter.]

IN PANAMA, it is said the treatment of resident foreigners is not improving. Not long since a German boy employed on the Pacific Mail Company's steamship [illegible] in the harbor, [illegible] had the safe thereof of $1,800 in gold, and the armory of a revolver the weapon having the initials of the company on it. The boy escaped to Aspinwall, where he was followed and arrested, and the money and pistol found on him. He confessed that he stole the money, and so was put in prison. He was taken to Panama, when he was persuaded to withdraw his confession, and the court generously decided that as the boy was employed on the steamer he had only borrowed the pistol, that the money could not be identified, and so he might return the pistol when he was done with it, and keep the $1,800!

[illegible], March 28, 1864.

Messrs. TILTON & McFARLAND,

Safe Manufacturers, Boston, Mass.

Gentlemen:—From representations made by Mr. Lillie I was induced to purchase of him one of his

So Called "Fire Proof Safes."

On the 28th of February last, a fire occurred in our block which destroyed a number of buildings, [illegible] own with the rest. We trusted our books, papers and all in the safe. After the fire the so-called "safe" was taken from the ruins, and on opening it we found that

Everything had been Destroyed.

We send you the safe with what is left of the papers and you will see that not one of them is legible or strong enough to sustain its own weight. Having the curiosity to know how our neighbors fared in this fire, we called at McKenzie & Hardy's just opening their safe (TILTON & McFARLAND'S make) and its contents were found to be

In Perfect Condition.

This led us to further investigation, and we found to our astonishment that from the large amount of combustible material in Messrs. McK. & H.'s store—such as lard, pork, etc.—their safe was subjected to a much greater heat than that of our own, we being in the clothing business and had but little in the cellar. There was another of Lillie's safes here subjected to the same fire faring, however, no better than ours.

Very respectfully,

Your obedient servants,

(Signed.) GEO. L. CHESBORO & CO.

TILTON & M'FARLAND'S SAFE,

Against Fire and Burglars.

For the last Fifteen Years

This Safe has been well known in California and the Eastern States. They have resisted all the fires on the Pacific Coast, and we can point with satisfaction to the record that Diseases of the Throat, Bronchitis, Pains and Oppression of the Chest and Lungs, Difficult Breathing and all the Diseases of the Pulmonary Organs.

ITS ACTION IS EXPECTORANT, ALTERATIVE, SUDORIFIC, SEDATIVE, DIAPHORETIC AND DIURETIC, which renders it one of the most valuable remedies known for curing diseases of the lungs. It excites expectoration, and causes the lungs to throw off the phlegm or mucus; CHANGES THE SECRETIONS AND PURIFIES THE BLOOD, heals the irritated parts; gives strength to the digestive organs; brings the liver to its proper action, and imparts strength to the whole system. Such is the immediate and satisfactory effect that it is WARRANTED TO BREAK UP THE MOST DISTRESSING COUGH IN A FEW HOURS' TIME, if not of too long standing. IT IS WARRANTED to give entire satisfaction even in the MOST CONFIRMED CASES OF CONSUMPTION! IT IS WARRANTED NOT to produce costiveness (which is the case with most remedies) or affect the head as it contains no Opium in any form. IT IS WARRANTED TO BE PERFECTLY HARMLESS to the most delicate child although it is an active and powerful remedy for restoring the system. THERE IS NO REAL NECESSITY FOR SO MANY DEATHS BY CONSUMPTION, when ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM will prevent it, if only taken in time.

Sold by all Druggists. Price $1 per bottle.
